CIA HISTORICAL REVIEW PROGRAM
RELEASE IN FULL 1995

Dear Walt:

Thank you for letting me have a chance to see your compilation of planning tasks. Ray Cline has been keeping me informed in general terms concerning this laudable activity, and I assure you that both the concept of planning and the tasks you have in mind make a great deal of sense to us.

The Secretary's letter proposing systematic planning for crises is obviously of direct concern to the intelligence community. We will keep in close touch with the work of the Policy Planning Council and assist them in any way we can in implementing the Secretary's proposal.

Ray may have some ideas of his own to crank into the development of the planning tasks and the effort at crises anticipation. He will be my principal representative for these matters, bringing in other talent as appropriate. I am sure that he will make available to you the best support we can muster to insure that the intelligence community makes an effective contribution to these important and difficult projects.

Sincerely yours,

John A. McCone

DEPARTMENT OF STATE
WASHINGTON

August 9, 1962 ;

Dear John:

I don't know whether you have seen the proposed assignments for Basic National Security Policy planning tasks which have evolved from our work over the past several months. It lays out a planning structure for the town along the lines we discussed at your home early in the year. I hope it fulfills the function that I have had very much in mind; namely, to provide an orderly framework around which the intelligence community can make its contribution to policy formation through the planning process.

In addition, I enclose a copy of the Secretary of State's instruction setting in motion an exercise in crisis anticipation and the prompt exploitation of moments of opportunity. I have designated Henry Ramsey, of our Policy Planning Council, to take responsibility for organizing this work in which the intelligence function is, evidently, of critical importance.

I look forward to closest relations with your people as this planning effort unfolds. I hope it fulfills the objectives we discussed together.

Yours,

W. W. Rostow

THE SECRETARY OF STATE
WASHINGTON

July 2, 1962

CONFIDENTIAL

MEMORANDUM TO THE ASSISTANT SECRETARIES

SUBJECT: Systematic Planning for Crises

As a result of several meetings on the anticipation of crises, I am requesting a new procedure to strengthen our performance in this area.

While the exact shape and date of a particular crisis is virtually unpredictable, we can endeavor to isolate and act briskly to exploit moments of transient opportunity, observe trends and situations that are likely to produce crises, and systematically think out ahead of time the critical dimensions of the problems these crises will create. In the light of such thought we may generate lines of action which could prevent, mitigate, or even turn such situations to our advantage. A great deal of work within the Department is already addressed to these objectives.

A successful program to meet these objectives will require the closest cooperation among those who illuminate the alternatives available to us, those who make decisions, and those who carry them out. I want to insure that a greater portion of the energies of the desk officers, who are so often absorbed in the day's immediate problems, are directed toward steps we should be taking now in order to improve our posture in the future. The purpose of this program is to provide a systematic means for strengthening the contribution of the Policy Planning Council to the operating bureaus in this respect. The operating bureaus retain full discretion and responsibility for the implementation of recommendations emanating from the informal working groups organized under this program.

I am therefore requesting Mr. Rostow to consult with each of you in order to undertake the following program:

1. Arrangements for consultation on a regular and systematic basis, between designated officers of the Policy Planning Council and the operating bureaus to select an initial list of problems for anticipatory planning on a priority basis and to establish a regular procedure for identifying situations of opportunity.

2. Establishment of small, informal working groups under the leadership of the Policy Planning Council, including representation from the responsible bureaus, and the intelligence and planning community, to develop specific plans and time tables for action on each designated priority problem.

3. Presentation of reports and recommendations of the working groups to the Assistant Secretary of the responsible bureau for his consideration and such action as he finds appropriate.
